

aboutarchiveministhe sheddinner tablestoresupport wbw

10 Absurdly Famous People You Probably Don't Know Enough About

📅 May 14, 2014 By Tim Urban

The memory is from 14 years ago, but it stings like it was yesterday.

"I think he's a famous old actor," I said, during a game I play with friends where you have to get your team to say a name you're reading on a slip of paper that they can't see.

"Humphrey Bogart!" one person yelled out.

"Charlie Chaplin. Marlon Brando!" another hollered.

My heart sank as I looked at the words "Henry Kissinger" written on the paper I was holding. I was in a "I somehow don't know who this incredibly famous person is and I'm about to be horribly exposed for it" situation. There's no feeling quite like it.

But wipe that fucking grin off your face, because here's the thing about famous historical people—there are a lot of them. And you learn about these people in a variety of ways—school, parents, books, articles, movies, etc.—but the system isn't airtight. Throughout your life, you fill in more and more of the gaps, but no matter who you are, you have some embarrassing gaps somewhere. I can sum it up like this:

There are some names in everyone's Danger Zone. Beware the Danger Zone. To break it down further, here's where you can fall when it comes to a famous name:

Your Level of Knowledge About a Super Famous Person

Zone 1 is by far the most dangerous, and as you get older, there are fewer and fewer big names there (I was 18 during the Kissinger Catastrophe—18-year-olds tend to have a lot of big names in Zone 1). But most people reach full adulthood with a still-crowded Zone 2, and names that are referenced all the time should ideally not be in Zone 2.

Today, we're going to focus on a 10 absurdly famous, almost mythic people (much more famous than Kissinger) who are yet in a lot of people's Zone 2 (and maybe even a few in Zone 1)—when you finish the post, they should all be in your (and my) Zone 3, and you'll be safe. I got to this list by surveying friends and readers about which huge names they were ashamed to know very little about, and these are some names that came up again and again.

3.4k Shares read, you'll come across some that are already in your Zone 3 or 4, and you'll be surprised even on the list. But remember, everyone's different life experience leaves them with their own set of gaps—where you have gaps is typically a random crapshoot—and some of the names you know very little about will seem totally obvious to someone else. Let's get going—

Alexander the Great

Lived: 356 – 323 BC

In 11 words: Strapping man's man world conqueror who greatly expanded Greek civilization

His main thing: When Alexander was 20, his father, King Philip II of the ancient kingdom of Macedon, was assassinated by one of his bodyguards. Philip II had had military ambitions to expand his kingdom into Persia, and Alexander inherited an army ready for battle. But no one had any idea what this kid's deal was—turns out power had just been handed to one of the most prolific conquerors in history. For the next 12 years, Alexander would accomplish his father's ambitions and go far beyond—into Egypt and as far East as present-day Pakistan. The crazy thing is he was just getting started—his stated expansion goal was "the ends of the world and the Great Outer Sea", and he was well on his way (he made a push towards India, and his next plans were to take the Arabian Peninsula) when he died of some sickness (or possible assassination) at the age of 32.

What's especially cool about Alexander the Great is that he did it all in his 20s. He was just a dude in his 20s and in his brief 12-year stint, he did this:

Modified from source.

This was the largest empire in Ancient Greek history, and though things declined soon after his death, his conquests allowed Greek culture to spread far and wide and launched the Hellenistic Period of Ancient Greek Civilization, whose influence carried as far as the Byzantine Empire almost 2,000 years later.

Other things:

- His primary tutor between the ages of 13 and 16 was none other than Aristotle. Very weird that those two hung out a lot in a room alone together. I desperately want to know what they talked about and what their private jokes were and what kind of life advice Aristotle gave Alexander. Also fun picturing Aristotle coming to a session and being annoyed that Alexander the Great hadn't done his homework.
- This relationship turned nasty later on, as Alexander became paranoid toward the end of his life and sent Aristotle threatening letters. Some theories even suggest Aristotle may have played a part in Alexander's death.
- His reign began in Game of Thrones style. His father, the king, had had a new wife at the time of his death, and as Alexander was assuming power, Alexander's mom (and the king's ex) had the new wife and her daughter burned alive. Alexander had several other potential political rivals executed, and then when a series of neighboring Greek states rebelled against his rule, Alexander razed their cities, defeating them one by one until he had consolidated power over all of Greece. He then launched into foreign expansion.
- His mother was quite the person. On top of her habit of burning rival women alive, she was the ultimate hyper-ambitious tiger mom, putting annoying pressure on Alexander to conquer the world and convincing him (and others) that she was impregnated by Zeus before her marriage and that Alexander was the son of Zeus.
- Alexander was undefeated in battle in his life, despite often being outnumbered.
- Though ruthless in conquest and in politics, he was unusually gracious to the families of those who died in battle, granting them immunity from taxation and public service.
- Alexander founded over 20 cities and named them after himself, including Alexandria in Egypt.
- Some historians believe Alexander was bisexual and was in a relationship with his best friend, Hephaestion. He also had a harem of women at his access, but rarely "used it."
- He is said to have had one brown eye and one blue eye.
- What Hitler tried to do is essentially the same thing Alexander tried to do (though with more genocide), but it was so long ago that the tragic element of it carries no emotion today. If Hitler had done his thing 2,400 years ago, we might know him as Hitler the Great today.

2014 equivalent: Mark Zuckerberg

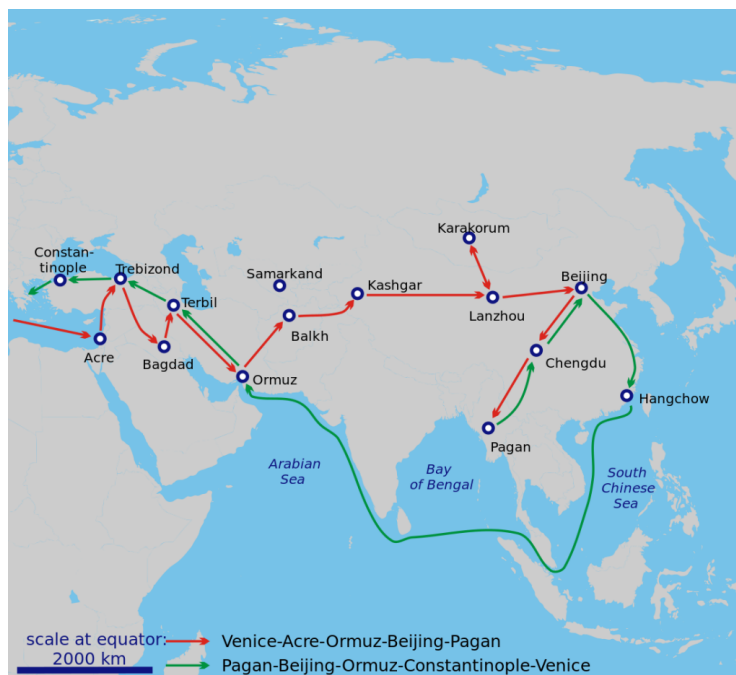

Marco Polo

Lived: 1254 – 1324

In 11 words: First European to document travels to Asia after 24-year voyage

His main thing: Marco Polo was 15 when he first met his father and uncle, who were traveling merchants returning to Venice from a long voyage. They wasted no time planning their next one, this time taking 17-year-old Marco with them. The voyage lasted an epic 24 years, and went like this:

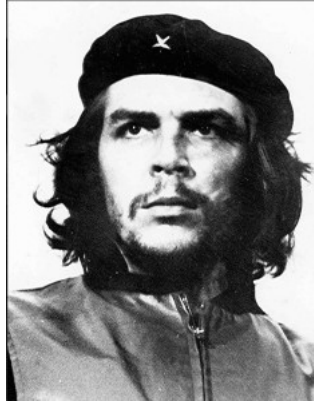

The thing that makes Marco Polo so famous isn't that he was the first European to explore Asia—he wasn't—it's that he was the first one to document it, in his book The Travels of Marco Polo. He returned to Venice from his 24-year voyage in his early 40s and lived the rest of his life there as a wealthy merchant.

Other things:

- He returned from his voyage to find Venice in battle with rival city-state Genoa. He joined the fight and was soon imprisoned. It was in prison that he wrote his famous book—except he didn't write it. He dictated it to his cellmate, who happened to be a romance writer.
- In China, the Polos befriended Mongol leader (and Genghis Khan grandson) Kublai Khan, and Marco worked for a few years as his envoy. Kublai became attached and refused to let the Polos leave, but when a Mongol princess needed to be escorted to Persia to marry the king, the Polos got the gig. The long sea voyage (see map) was unpleasant—only 18 of the hundreds of passengers survived, but all three Polos made it.
- Polo's mind was blown upon seeing elephants, crocodiles, monkeys, and rhinoceroses for the first time and mistook them for mythical creatures (he thought rhinos were unicorns). This is totally fair—imagine how weird those animals would seem if you had never seen them before.
- The whole thing about Polo bringing pasta or pizza to Italy is a tall tale, but he did bring back stories of paper money, an unknown concept in Europe at the time.
- Christopher Columbus got FOMO about Polo's travels, and this was one of the major reasons he became an explorer. He always carried a copy of Polo's book with him.

2014 equivalent: Curiosity Rover

Che Guevara

Lived: 1928 – 1967

In 11 words: Charismatic, polarizing, ruthless Marxist revolutionary, enduring symbol of rebellion and counterculture

His main thing: I can't be the only one who has spent my life confused as to why the guy on the t-shirts is such a big thing. The Maryland Institute College of Art called the above photograph (taken of him at a memorial service) "the most famous photograph in the world," and today, the image is a ubiquitous logo that symbolizes rebellion against authority, capitalism, and imperialism. But who was he?

Che grew up as an Argentinian math-loving, chess-playing intellectual who got his medical degree and became a doctor before deciding he'd rather be a rad dude. He took those ambitions to Mexico, where he met the Castro brothers, and they hit it off because both parties hated the US and blamed capitalist imperialism for most of the world's suffering. He went back to Cuba with the Castros and helped overthrow the government, and he was a key member of Fidel Castro's new regime, both as a brutal executioner of political enemies and as the Finance Minister, shifting Cuban trade relations away from the US and toward the Soviet Union. He was an energetic dude and spent a lot of time in foreign countries trying to incite revolution, until he botched it and was captured by the CIA-assisted Bolivian military and executed at the age of 39.

Other things:

- He's a polarizing figure today, both loved by some as an inspirational symbol of counterculture and loathed by others as an insufferable symbol of counterculture.
- People aren't quite clear that in addition to being a valiant revolutionary, he was a ruthless murderer, executing hundreds of people without trial in Cuba.
- Right before he died, he managed to bully his timid executioner, screaming "Shoot me, you coward! You are only going to kill a man!"
- He was notoriously smelly, proudly changing his shirt once a week.
- His honeymoon apparently sucked.^[1]

2014 equivalent: Some mixture of Occupy Wall Street and al-Qaeda

Mother Teresa

Lived: 1910 – 1997

In 11 words: Nice, possibly dickish nun who dedicated herself to helping the poor

Her main thing: Mother Teresa decided to obnoxiously spend her life making the rest of us look bad by dedicating everything she had to “serving the poorest of the poor.” She is ethnically Albanian, grew up in the Ottoman Empire (in present-day Macedonia), and moved to India at the age of 18 to be a nun. And for the next 17 years, that’s what she was—a nun and a teacher, and she seemed content with this until Jesus, she says, told her to stop being a dud and do something to help all of the ridiculously poor people around her. So she changed her path and founded the Missionaries of Charity, which, among other things, ran hospices for poor, sick people so those “who lived like animals could die like angels.” She proved to be quite the entrepreneur, leveraging her growing celebrity and taking her work abroad, eventually scaling her charity to 133 countries with the help of 4,500 involved sisters. She won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979, and tends to be a symbol of all things good today.

Other things:

- Though she lived her life on humble means, she was actually born into a wealthy family.
- She was highly chaste. What a waste of a bullet point.
- Some controversy swirls around her legacy, despite her overall shining reputation, centered around her vocal campaigns against contraception (some even believe she exaggerated how bad it was in India to get more attention) and her refusal to adopt Western medical standards in favor of poorer facilities because she believed that “suffering” brings people closer to Christ.

2014 equivalent: Some NGO you’ve never heard of because people like Mother Teresa are usually not famous

Julius Caesar

Lived: 100 – 44 BC

In 11 words: Roman general/dictator who laid the ground for the Roman Empire

His main thing: He came up from modest means and actually got a pretty late start. When he visited Spain at the age of 32, he saw a statue of Alexander the Great and it put him in a bad mood because he felt that he had accomplished very little (typical GYPSY). And he was just getting started as a priest before a war of rivals in his hometown ended the wrong way and forced him out of that title—so he turned toward the military instead. He rose steadily, both in military rank and political influence, until he eventually overpowered the weak senate, overthrew the Roman Republic, and was declared dictator.

He was a good leader, beloved by most of the people and made sweeping changes to the constitution, laws, and government structure that laid the groundwork for the Roman Empire, which would flourish for almost 500 years after his assassination.

Other things:

- Caesar was a cool dude. When he was captured by pirates and held prisoner once earlier in his life, they demanded twenty talents of silver for him as ransom. He interrupted and insisted they ask for fifty instead, which they then received. After they freed him, he got his fleet together, chased the pirates down, took back the money, and crucified them—something he told them he was going to do when he was in their captivity and they had laughed at him.
- Caesar had a full relationship with Cleopatra, which took place both in Egypt and in Caesar’s villa near Rome, which she would visit. This is like Aristotle tutoring Alexander the Great, where I’m just flabbergasted that two people who are that legendary hung out and slept together and cuddled. It’s just weird. [\[2\]](#) More on this in the Cleopatra section on the next page.
- He was assassinated by a bunch of the old guard he had overthrown, but they were unable to take power themselves because the masses had loved Caesar and they didn’t have support. Instead, Caesar’s adopted heir Octavian (Caesar’s great nephew since he had no sons) took power as the first Roman Emperor (under the name Augustus).

- 2014 equivalent: Steve Jobs

Pages: 1 2

 Like 2K
  Share
  Tweet
  G+

 submit
  Save
  3 ket 2,809

146 Comments Wait But Why  Login  Recommend 10  Share Sort by Newest

Join the discussion...

LOG IN WITH

OR SIGN UP WITH DISQUS

- Bright Soo • 2 months ago

Hey Tim, where are the "future volumes of this post"?

^ | ▾ • Reply • Share >

Maximilien Robespierre • 6 months ago

Mother Teresa was born to (today) FYROM, not Macedonia....

^ | ▾ • Reply • Share >

Mikael Guggenheim • 9 months ago

I find it hard to believe Ceasar was stabbed 23 times by 60 different people. It doesn't really ad up. :P

5 ^ | ▾ • Reply • Share >

Michal Kostecki → Mikael Guggenheim • a month ago

Stab per person i guess :P

^ | ▾ • Reply • Share >

 The Ripper  • a year ago
besides cleopatra, not another black person is referenced here.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

 Night King → The Ripper  • 6 months ago
She wasn't black though.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

 The Ripper  → Night King • 6 months ago
She wasnt white either.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

 The Ripper  → Night King • 6 months ago
She wasnt white either. But, Chances are, she looked more like obama than Trump. As well as the rest of the poly ethnic society that was classical greece.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

 Justan American → The Ripper  • 7 months ago
You didn't read the article at all. Cleoptra was GREEK not Egyptian. And he referred to Mandella and MLK many times.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

 The Ripper  → Justan American • 7 months ago
Cleopatra was Born, raised, and died in Egypt – she was Egyptian. And the Greek Empire included Egypt so she was also Greek. As every other Egyptian was as well. Do better. If your point was to say that she wasn't black but greek (because to every white person - greek = white, even though modern-day greeks weren't even considered white until decades after post WWII) then your as dumb as you appear. 1000 years from now, you all will be saying that barack Obama wasnt black, he was clearly American. Americans were obviously all white.

2 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

 Night King → The Ripper  • 6 months ago
She descended from Ptolemy I, a Greek general who took control of Egypt after death of Alexander the Great.
The Ptolemaic dynasty was fond of keeping their bloodline "pure" by repeated incest, so there was basically no Egyptian blood in her.
Anyways "Blacks" are sub-saharan Africans, North Africans don't actually fit the term. (btw, Obama's mother was white.)

^ | v • Reply • Share >

 The Ripper  → Night King • 6 months ago
You are operating under the assumption that ptolemy was white. He wasnt. Neither was alexander. Cleopatra was greek and she was also egyptian. Samalians were also greek so too were arabs, northhern and east africans for that matter. The ptolemeic dynasty existed for almost 300 years in egypt if i recall correctly. You speak of that dynasty as if they hailed from nordic peoples. They didnt. The greeks were poly-ethnic just as Americans today are poly-ethnic if not more so then than we are today. But, i guess 1000 years from now when the speak of the American dynasty, some foolish person will say the "the great general Obama wasnt black, he was american, and the obamas kept their bloodline pure in a poly-ethnic socitey for 300 years. Surrounded by a huge black majority in a small city called Chi-cah-go.

When spewing ignorance fools will always rush in. You are no exception to that maxim.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

 The Ripper  • a year ago pretty sure ghandi was a flaming racist.

3 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

 Kriang Panya • a year ago
How come more than 60 men stabbed only 23 times?

Just saw the answer, sorry.

1 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

 salmon • 2 years ago
Have you read Gandhi's autobiography? The fact that he can admit to all of his faults speaks to his character, but some of his actions were seriously morally questionable. I definitely don't view him as some sort of special saint after reading it; he was a real asshole before he started his political career, and he kind of misrepresented himself as an Indian to gain the trust of the country. He was more British than anything else.

Anyway, when his wife was pregnant with their child, and his father was slowly dying from disease, one night Gandhi decided to sleep with his wife against her will while his father died in an adjacent room. That's right, he literally raped his pregnant wife while his father died, calling for his son in his final moments. Gandhi hates himself for that, but it shows that he's not some sort of perfect human being in a unique class. He even thought his actions caused the death of his baby when it was born prematurely.

<http://www.mkgandhi.org/aut...>

1 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

anon → salmon • 2 years ago

"That's right, he literally raped his pregnant wife while his father died, calling for his son in his final moments" Sorry but the link you posted basically proves this sentence to be bullshit...

6 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

lecreepingdeath • 2 years ago

Yes, the killer of thousands (maybe millions) Alexeandar the Great and Julius Caesar's modern equivalents are computer innovators but Che's equivalent is Al Qaeda. American Logic as its finest

16 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

daisy37 • 2 years ago

There's no such thing as "briefly becoming a priest". Galileo may have considered the priesthood, but the very process of becoming a priest is not brief, and it's a pretty permanent thing so he most certainly was never a priest—even briefly.

1 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

metallhead120 • 2 years ago

While I love your blog I cant stand your hate (Most of americans hate) towards communism or communism representatives. Come on, those Che Guevara random notes were like a 5 years old bullying his disabled classmate (disabled cause Che is dead thus he can't even defend himself). "Oh he was smelly, cruel and bla bla bla" I really wish you were from UK or any other english or spanish speaking country so you didnt have your ideas and perceptions so twisted by USA anticommunism subliminal propaganda. This also comes to light in your article about North Korea... Such a shame your brilliant mind falls into that fallacy. We are surroundings and our experiences so I don't blame you for any of these, just to make it clear.

PD: I'm not communist or something (Not that it should matter anyway) but I'm so fed with these biased points of view most North Americans have.

8 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Leo Clavel → metallhead120 • 2 years ago

Was he supposed to just ignore the fact that Che was the top executioner of the Castro Revolution, executing hundreds of political enemies personally?

7 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

metallhead120 → Leo Clavel • 2 years ago

Sorry but I can't find anywhere on my comment where I said that... I just said he only said bad things and irrelevant bad things about him like he was smelly like "look at him his honeymoon was a disaster hurr durr" who the hell cares lmao.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

Leo Clavel → metallhead120 • 2 years ago

Well, after I find out that someone murdered hundreds of political enemies personally and without trial - sons, fathers, uncles - for suspicion of non-allegiance, I kinda don't care to read about any nice things - like that his favorite color was blue.

6 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

sam → Leo Clavel • 2 years ago

don't want to disappoint you but great, admired leaders, conquerors in the world who are admired by everybody were mostly power-loving serial killers.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

metallhead120 → Leo Clavel • 2 years ago

Did I asked him to put nice things about Che? no I didn't, I'm just saying those infantile "facts" doesnt have to do with anything and they are completely unnecessary and uninformative

^ | v • Reply • Share >

Leo Clavel → metallhead120 • 2 years ago

Yes, you complained about exactly that: "he only said bad things and irrelevant bad things".

2 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

metallhead120 → Leo Clavel • 2 years ago

That isn't equal to "put nice things about che" I'm sorry to tell you

That isn't equal to - put nice things about Che - I'm sorry to tell you.
1 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

metallhead120 → Leo Clavel • 2 years ago
Still can't see where I asked him to put nice things about him. sorry.
^ | v • Reply • Share >

loncip → metallhead120 • a year ago
You said - "While I love your blog I cant stand your hate (Most of americans hate) towards communism or communism representantives" - I think the commies are the biggest fukking mass murders in the hystory - and I know it because I lived in a part of the world affected by them; they killed and killed and left parts of the world in a primitive era from the moral point of view; so Che and Co and also Stalin, Lenin, Castro and all commies dictators - all are just killers; also the russians; nothing good about them; they surpass Cesar+Alexander+Genghis Han and even + Hitler. They murder they own people and others ethnics or people just to change theirs beliefs or for fun. To not forget Kim Jong-un and family. So that is why I think someone cannot stand commies; they are the scourge of the world - P.S. - i am not american if you wonder
^ | v • Reply • Share >

Khurram • 3 years ago
This is bothering me. How did Caesar get stabbed 23 times by 60 men? Am I missing something? Is there a typo?
^ | v • Reply • Share >

antinea → Khurram • 2 years ago at least 37 of them missed lol
1 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Nicolas Daoust → Khurram • 2 years ago
Cooperative stabbing!

Nah, seriously, it's not typo, alghough I did a double-take myself. 60 men were involved in the stabbing, but not all of them personnally put a knife to Cesar.
4 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Mars_Ultor • 3 years ago
Genghis Khan shouldve been up here.
2 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Carl • 3 years ago
Holy cats, how could anyone write a summary of Che Guevara's life without including his book, one of the coolest ever written?? https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Revolution_and_Revolutionary_War
3 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

jay • 3 years ago
it should be noted that a moroccan guy named ibn battuta actually traveled further than marco polo
4 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Katie Duval • 3 years ago
I loved this article so much! Sadly, none of these people previously made it to my zone 3 while most were stuck in zone 1 -but now I feel like I know stuff! After reading the article I scrolled through the name to see how much information I had actually retained and I now know how to not embarrass myself should I ever need to talk minimally about any of these people. Do more! Do more!
2 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Elaine Sihera • 3 years ago
What an exquisite website to get lost in! Just discovered it today. Full of so much knowledge, entertainment, friendliness, and bonhomie. Just superlative! Keep up the great work, guys! :o)
14 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Tipsy • 3 years ago
I think Hitchens more than slayed the 'friend of the poor' 'mother' Teresa myth you've endorsed here.
5 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Nora . • 3 years ago
Cleopatra's story was my favourite I applaud to you. I laughed so hard and I have to say that this was my favourite educational thing I've almost ever read.
^ | v • Reply • Share >

ericsp23 • 3 years ago
Galileo's father, Vincenzo Galilei, is actually of minor historical significance on his own. He was a composer who was one of a group of Italian composers who were instrumental in the development of opera as an art form. He also was a music theorist and studied the acoustics of vibrating strings. It has been suggested that Galileo was inspired to become a scientist by his father's acoustical studies.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

MicroMatrixx • 3 years ago

Why the hell is Tesla not on this list!!!

9 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Mike Ringland • 3 years ago

For your next one can you include Mao Zedong? He's a piece of crap, but he is nonetheless huge in 20th century history. Most westerners don't know anything about him and most Chinese are hopelessly misled about him.

8 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Hydra • 4 years ago

Brutus and Crassus were actually the good guys. While Caesar brought Rome into an era of dictatorship, the two wanted to restore the republic.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

Mars_Ultor → Hydra • 3 years ago

You're thinking of Brutus, Decimus and Cassius, not Crassus. Crassus was the Donald Trump of Rome, he got killed by the Parthians in 53BC.

Also I wouldn't call them 'good', they were traditionalists and reactionaries. Many of Caesar's land and money reforms benefited the poor and this really pissed off the establishment guys like Cicero and Cato (younger)

3 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Sally • 4 years ago

People I'm sure I don't want to know more about? The know it all and foul mouthed critics of Tim's blog. Get a life and learn to recognize humor when you see it. He isn't writing a History textbook. He is writing a fresh and clever blog on an interesting topic. This is laugh out loud stuff and interesting at the same time. Think you can do better? Doubtful.

8 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

stephenie martinez • 4 years ago

i am so smart that i read all this in a minute. my friend read it in a hour

^ | v • Reply • Share >

Anonymous • 4 years ago

this has a lot of reading that i got bored and fell asleep

^ | v • Reply • Share >

Nick the Greek • 4 years ago

FYRoM is not Macedonia and the peoples there are Slavic in all the ways that determine Slavs from non-Slavs.

Alexander the Great was the Greek King of Macedon...not the Yugoslavic King of Macedon.

Those who see FYRoM like Republic of Macedonia, see Paeonia like Macedonia, see Yugoslavs like Macedonians...have big issues with geography demography and history.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

messy57 → Nick the Greek • 4 years ago

Alexander III wasn't Greek he was Albanian.

^ | v • Reply • Share >

Jenn • 4 years ago

I didn't have a crush on you until you called Mother Teresa dickish. Now I'm yours.

3 ^ | v • Reply • Share >

Sally → Jenn • 4 years ago

Hilarious!

^ | v • Reply • Share >

Load more comments

ALSO ON WAIT BUT WHY

Describe a day in your great-great-granddaughter's life

80 comments • a year ago

Teach Me Something – Round 2

462 comments • 2 years ago

Cited In Israel, where I live, there's a species of 46 comments • 1 year ago

Yichen — She checks out waitbutwhy and realised Tim still has not published that post which he promised to publish to her great-great-grandfather ...

Who is the most powerful person on the planet?

258 comments • 2 years ago

Volt Cruelerz — It sort of depends on how you define power. If you define it as "who would cause the world to have the worst day if they took their ball and ...

Graau — In Israel, where I live, there's a species of crow that loves to eat a very specific kind of nut, which is too big to eat whole and needs to be ...

The Sheer Delight of Google Earth Timelapse

11 comments • 2 years ago

Bethany — I'm currently living in a small, newer village in Southwest Coastal Alaska and it's awesome to watch it pop up out of nowhere in the 2000's. It's ...

✉ Subscribe  Add Disqus to your siteAdd DisqusAdd  Disqus' Privacy PolicyPrivacy PolicyPrivacy

DISQUS

3 Comments

Sort by Top ↕

Add a comment...

Kenton Nickels

Never heard of that Che person till now, though I knew a pretty good ammount about Alexander the Great and Marco Polo.

Like · Reply ·  1 · 34w

Dragon Nest

Hi

Like · Reply · 1y

Evanz Thiosh

Interesting read. Now i know them!!!
<http://african-studies.uonbi.ac.ke/>

Like · Reply · 1y

 Facebook Comments Plugin

Home

Archive

Contact

© WaitButWhy 2018
Partner With Us
Privacy Policy

