

10 Types of 30-Year-Old Single Guys

📅 October 9, 2013 By Tim Urban

30-year-old guys are a curious bunch.

Find me a group of 30-year-old men and I'll pick out one overgrown frat dude living with roommates, another guy who just dropped his two kids off at school, a few who are well into their careers and a couple soul-searchers looking for work. Some will tell you that they've finally figured it all out and some more will say they feel hopeless for the first time in their lives. It's a motley crew.

But perhaps the motliest part of this crowd is the ever-growing group of 30-year-old single guys. If you want a case study in humanity, 30-year-old single guys have pretty much all the bases covered. Let's examine some of the common types:

1) The Total Package

waitbutwhy.com

The Total Package is smart—he went to a top college. The Total Package is an athlete, a musician, and an avid traveler. The Total Package is handsome—and you better believe he's well-groomed.

The Total Package has a hell of a career going, but don't you for a second suggest that The Total Package would be a workaholic—The Total Package is a family man.

There's just one thing The Total Package seems to be having a hard time finding—a girl worthy of his greatness.

Yes, the woman fit for The Total Package will be the ultimate icing on his cake of perfection. He imagines her often—gorgeous as they come, she turns heads; bursting with charm and charisma, she lights up every room she enters; she's a brilliant rising star in her career and beloved by her many friends. And that's just her public persona—at home, she's fantastic in bed, a spectacular cook, loving, selfless, and devoted. Oh and she also speaks French, plays tennis, sings beautifully, reads voraciously and she's a history buff. His Juliet.

Unsurprisingly, The Total Package is single. He's immersed in a fierce battle between his superhuman standards and his terror of being 40 and single—because 40 and single is not supposed to be part of The Total Package's story.

2) The New Lease On Life Guy

As long as anyone can remember, The New Lease On Life Guy had been dating his longtime girlfriend. He never seemed that happy in the relationship, but everyone just assumed they would eventually get married. Now, after a long and difficult breakup, The New Lease On Life Guy has reemerged with a bang and is suddenly acting like he just got called down on The Price Is Right. He's not really sure how to be single but he's goddamn happy he is, and he's sure as hell going out tonight.

He's also the arch-nemesis of The Resigned Fiance, who's in an equally unhappy relationship but just kind of kept going with it, unable to resist the sweet, sweet inertia, and who most certainly does not want to hear about The New Lease On Life Guy's latest exploits.

3) The Guy Who Has To Marry Someone Of The Same Ethnicity Or His Parents Will Never Speak To Him Again

It's hard enough finding someone to be your life partner, and this guy's parents are really not making things any easier. He tried to rebel briefly, but after his last girlfriend was not allowed in his parents' house, causing her to cry, he gave up on that.

He'd also really appreciate it if his mother would stop setting him up on dates.

4) The Misogynist

The Misogynist hates women, and women hate The Misogynist. The Misogynist doesn't know a whole lot about the other gender, but he can tell you the exact number of them he's slept with—214.

He did quite well with girls back in his earlier days when many were in their attracted to assholes phase, but lately, only those with the lowest self-esteem seem to gravitate towards him.

The Misogynist's close cousin is The Perpetual Cheater. They're different but they understand each other.

5) The Guy Who Peaked Too Early

Back in the day, The Guy Who Peaked Too Early had everything a 17-year-old girl could ever dream of. His sky-high confidence carried him smoothly through college, and no one was surprised when he landed a smart, sweet, beautiful girlfriend in his early 20s. But The Guy Who Peaked Too Early was just getting started. There was a field that needed to be played, and he broke up with his girlfriend when he was 24.

Now it's seven years later, his hair got bored and left, and his high school lacrosse glory isn't part of the conversation that much these days. And he's noticing that girls like his ex-girlfriend don't seem to be all that into him anymore. Realizing this about five years after everyone else, he takes a deep sigh and cranks his standards down a few big notches.

6) The Guy Who's Finally a Good Catch

On the other side of the coin, after losing some weight, getting decent clothes, and having early career success, The Guy Who's Finally a Good Catch is getting more attention each week than he got in his first 25 years combined. Girls find it endearing that such an appealing guy has managed to maintain his humility, when it's actually just that he's assuming every girl is out of his league at all times.

Once his new situation starts to sink in, he enters an unfortunate new phase, stressing his male friends out by doing things like winking at them over the shoulder of a girl he's dancing with and offering them a fist pound when an attractive girl walks by on the street.

7) The Normal Guy Who Just Hasn't Met The Right Girl Yet And He Really Wishes People Would Stop Looking At Him With Those Pitying Eyes

Ah, The NGWJHMTRGYAHRWPWSLAHWTP. The NGWJHMTRGYAHRWPWSLAHWTP is enjoying his life. He likes his job, he likes his friends, and he likes being single just fine. He's in no rush to be in a relationship and feels totally confident that at some point, he'll meet the right girl and get married.

He's also not quite sure why everyone who knows him is trying to figure out "what the problem is." His parents are worried, never wasting an opportunity to ask him if he's been dating anyone. His friends want to help, setting him up on dates every chance they get. He appreciates all the unsolicited support, but he also thinks it would be pretty great if everyone stopped thinking there was something wrong with him.

8) The Aggressively Online Dating Guy Who Can't Believe He's Not Married Yet

The opposite of the previous guy, The Aggressively Online Dating Guy Who Can't Believe He's Not Married Yet can't believe he's not married yet. Through high school, college and his twenties, he was always The Guy With A Girlfriend. He spent years enjoying pitying his single friends, and somehow, he's now 30 and single.

He has four online dating profiles, and when people ask him if he's dating anyone, he explains that he's just too busy with his career right now for a relationship.

9) The In-The-Closet Guy

The In-The-Closet Guy is so close to being the perfect catch—he's handsome, he's well-dressed, and he has a great job. He's funny, articulate, and charming. The only tiny little inconvenience is that he's not attracted to females whatsoever.

His antithesis is The NGWJHMTRGYAHRWPWSLAHWTPPE, who's had just enough of the theories about him being gay, since he's completely straight and, for the hundredth time, just hasn't met the right girl yet and is really very okay with being single right now.

10) The Guy Who Has Just Fully Quit At This Point

The Guy Who Has Just Fully Quit At This Point never tried that hard in the first place, but at least there used to be a semblance of effort. He doesn't like going to bars, refuses to try online dating, and both the bong and the X-Box are back in the living room following their brief stint in the closet after his friend gave him a pep talk one day four months ago.

Deep down, The Guy Who Has Just Fully Quit At This Point is pretty frightened about a lot of things, but his fear manifests itself in indifferent denial, and passivity usually prevails. There is only one way that things change for The Guy Who Has Just Fully Quit At This Point, and that's to find himself squarely in the sights of The Girl Who Relentlessly Pursues. Until then, the whole thing isn't really his issue.

Please, please, please - offer a detailed description of the "Incel"!!

I live near Toronto, and an "Incel" guy just killed 10 people and injured more by driving his van onto the sidewalks in a busy area of the city. According to this troglodyte, he did this in retaliation for all of the rejection he has experienced.

I would love to see your description :)

A woman or MGTOW definitely wrote this.

In fact whoever runs this entire site is somewhat clever at times, but it definitely shows that they are either an unattractive, sycophantic beta male, or an over-the-hill, unattractive/post-wall 30+ female who probably blew off that older male who didn't quite have his shit together, but wasn't fat or ugly and just needed a chance and a roommate to eventually land that higher income job.

Take it from me... I'm over 30. I never got to peak at all. I busted my ass to not be fat (I fail at working out utterly, thank you genetics/natural frailty I will forever be stuck bench pressing only the bar) and have the traits of the "misogynist" (only thing is I'd stop hating you women if you'd just let me be with one of you that's cute, young, natural and takes care of herself, just let me FALL FOR YOU already... ) and I'm definitely part that guy that's a string of letters that will never get to meet someone (ugh... do you know how miserable I am that everyone thinks I'm homosexual or insists I hate women - women have the one thing that pleases me! And I can't earn it! I mean if you weaponize feminine beauty, cuteness, and intimacy of course I'm going to be full of hate!

All the flaws of the guy who peaked too early and the guy who's finally a good catch, and none of the perks of either. *sigh*

I liked a guy in high school. Just sort of, as a friend but also slightly romantically too. He was in my drama class. I asked him to a school dance. He declined, saying he "had to spend time with his grandmother that weekend". (Yeah, right). Well I ran into him at a school reunion over 30 years later. Time has not been kind to his looks. He's ugly now. Like, very ugly. That droopy eye he used to have droops even more now. He's out of shape, very overweight. I decided not to even re-introduce myself. I didn't want to. He's not someone I would date now (if I were single). He's probably married to someone just as homely as he is. I'm just glad now I didn't go to that dance with him. Thank you, God, for sparing me!

You don't think he genuinely made plans with his grandmother? You'd be surprised how many guys really care for their family like that.

Hehehe a number 5...although I'm not bald or fat; I'm quite bitter actually because I was very able to succeed with girls easily during highschool and college, but after that...I just cant get my shit together; my job barely lets me survive and to put it simply I just don't have any real life plan (i still can't finish college; im 26).... Most of the girls of my age are into older guys and older women just don't seem to look at me at all. And it seems that I'm not even interesting enough to younger girls! Thats something that makes me specially mad, since it was like a very drastic change. From 16 to 24 I was able to score quite easily; I never passed more than one month without sex since 16. But now it just feels too hard...when trying to talk to a girl I always feel as if I'm reeeeaally trying too hard. Also, I'm quite bitter at the fact that everything revolves around money and having life goals for women, while we just usually ask of them to be pretty...and not even THAT pretty...just...desirable. Or the fact that being a man over 30 and not having too much money or a car instantly makes you a loser and not dateable to a lot of girls (I'm aware this statement is pretty unfair also, since women have a lot of social pressure on different aspects). I know this kind of thinking just makes me look even more pathetic so I never talk about it, but I just had to do it now. Anyone here that have been in the same position as me that can give any advice before its too late? Something besides "man up and look for the money".

Hi you don't need money to be interesting for a women. You need to have interests. (in people, in charity, in bird watching, animals, cycling, whatever) Just stop be desperate to find a women and try find yourself a live. Women comes suddenly herself.

You definitely need money. Be realistic. It's not everything, but it's absolutely necessary.

Seems like MGTOW is strong in the comment section. I must admit, my opinion of women and relationships have changed over the last few months (since my breakup and being introduced to MGTOW), but I do still envision myself in a long term relationship in my future, although maybe not marriage, that seems like a trap.

Well since most women nowadays are very busy sleeping around with different men all the time, and like to party and get wasted with their girlfriends every chance they get which tells the whole true story right there. How in the world would these very pathetic loser women be able to commit to only one man anyway? Very impossible. And it is women like them why so many of us men are still single today.

Most women aren't worth pursuing these days anyway so being #1 or #10 wouldn't matter in all reality. The #10 will end up with the SAMEEEEE kind of b*tch that #1 will end up with. The only difference is that #1 will have a better looking women next to his side. In the end though, child support, alimony, nagging, cheating still takes place. So honestly i cant blame the guy that gave up at all. I could be a millionaire writing this and it would make no difference. The women of today are of lower quality regardless. Truth hurts!

And before reading this and saying I hate females and blah blah blah, I do believe there are good women out there, I just believe men in this day and age are wasting their time and energy on taking that gamble to find her.

I thought I was going crazy, I'm 30 and I'm like - may be i have to be realistic because I'm a realist and what i mean is, may be i should start dating women with kids or a kid etc, because the reality is like you said, there are no real good quality women out here. Like you said "the women of today are of lower quality regardless." I'm sitting here waiting for this bad beautiful women with no kids go head on her shoulders love being a women ( not a feminist) and effeminate and also is not in the club every weekend or having body counts every other weekend, and the truth is it ain't going to happen - so the reality is for me I have to make due with what I have. you only make due with what you accept, don't lower your standards to date single mothers unless she's someone worth being with. I've dated some single moms who are entitled as hell and it's painfully obvious over time as to why they're single. Avoid single moms under 25, these are not women with good decision making skills.

Men need to up their standards as to what we date. biology & hormones control us so strongly that we make dumb decisions like getting married or having children with a woman who is probably not right for you all for the sake of sex & not being "lonely". You have to kill that and channel your energy into fruitful endeavors whether they be work, networking & building friendships, accomplishing personal goals like getting in shape, eating right, hobbies that bring gratification.

This right here....#1 to #10 generalisations same with most of the comments....Pedros advice is good. The focus on what you cant have is wrong, focus on what you do have better what you have as mentioned here...your friendships, accomplishments and the rest will come... This focus on the negative that we all seem to have at some point in our lives is just a moment/phase (some phases longer than others of course). But nothing really lasts forever not even the bad moments.....focus and stop concentrating on whats bogus...these moments become bogus because things always change so they no longer exist at a point! And yes im about to become single and going through a phase myself at 34....Good looking have actually always been able to get women with limited effort, have a good job, very nice drop top car, and still have quite similar thoughts to everyone hear...worrying about the big change finding someone new...etc...but hey we made it this far in life are you guys really saying ya not up to lifes challenges...I am!!!! oh and hopefully I am not back here at 54 saying...I was wrong guys this 'ish is hard lolololol.....Speak life overcome all hurdles until that very last moment!

Sad reality for us men. But you're a man. Men dont reach their peak income until 40 bro. So focus on finances, start a business if you don't have one. You'll have a better pick as you elevate your self mentally and financially. As of now just have fun. Youtube this name; Tom Leykis

"You can either love a woman or understand them, you can't do both"

Exactly lol I fit in that category "The guy that figured women out". Once I figured women out, my mindset changed, and I dont view women like how society tells us to (women are innocent, precious, angelic, etc.). After years of denial and trying to convince myself all women cant be similar, it took me to my later 20s to finally realize... Most, if not all, women do not love men unconditionally, its not in their DNA, they fall for what a man does for them. And yes, you can either love a woman unconditionally along with all the issues they bring, or you can understand them.... take your pick..

#7 & yeah i like being single since most women i meet expect perfection(& no my standards are not to high).They just seems to be too picky(not dressed properly,not having a nice car in their opinion,am not a doctor,lawyer etc but am getting almost pulled by the sleeve by girls 10+ years younger then me but i need a women not a girl in their early 20's.....am 34 by the way).....& am tired of it.Other words fuck it am done with dating....for the time being.

For me its better to be single then in bad relationship or am i wrong?

2 ^ | v • Reply • Share ›

Mr.CommonSense ➔ Mikey BHF • 4 months ago

No you arent wrong, because im in the same boat. Women expect men to be these perfect creatures that know and can do EVERYTHING,..... I tell those women upfront, "Im a flawed individual, and so are you, so if youre looking for perfection, YOU better be perfect". This is when they are usually brought back down to earth from being on there high horse or they usually get turned off, and i dont care.

Trust me, you arent the only one dealing with this BS out here in the dating world..

this two, i've lived this!! Ignorance is bliss...start talking the truth to her and she is turned off....asked my ex why she just started getting annoyed and arguing every chance she got, she came outright and said I spoiled her fairy tale....lololol basically by telling her the truth she is 29.....!!! But i still believe the world is big and we cant generalise.... loads of women fit the category and i'm sure there are still a nice amount of adult women out there that also understand life and reality....remember men are usually brought up more harsh while women are usually pampered... this could be where that mentality comes from with some..... might need a girl with 4 big brothers lolol she may not have been pampered so much then....lol...might be able to kick ya ass though.....cant have it all...lol

They either have daddy issues, expect free food on first date, and put to much pressure on dates. Emphasis is bringing in how much you make, car drive, and can you dress up in way I like. Turned men into cowards and then claimed where are you men. Women are mentally unstable and expect men to bow down to them. Look down upon men and are their worst nightmares. No tear shed for them.

Um.. none of those are me. I'm the creepy looking artist/musician who has a relationship that lasts a month or two once every five years. I don't really care about money and I'm not the greatest looking guy by any means. I'm pretty smart but I don't read many books as I find them to be too time consuming and would rather spend my time working on my own creations, which most people don't really understand. I want a girlfriend more than anything besides world peace of course, and I go out and talk to girls pretty often. Yet, my looks and lack of dough seem to make me pretty undesirable... I just hope I get to be reincarnated as a bird or something cuz man I'm depressed.

Yeah, life is rough. Take one day at a time and try to make small attainable goals to keep you busy. People say the trick is being happy with yourself however I can totally relate to the dating world being beyond awful - you learn alot from it but more often then not from my experiences you spend tons of time meeting the wrong one or ones that are not interested. 10 here, don't care much at this point. Just pursue my interests but I don't go out of my way to try to find anyone to date. Social anxiety in my younger years pretty much kept me from socializing normally so I got used to being alone even if women were interested. Sometimes the journey doesn't fit the narrative we're told but being able to navigate and stay level headed about whatever happens is key.

Matthew Smith, I suffer with social anxiety often too. I went through unfair circumstances from the swirling swoops of the twirling vampiristic type vultures out there who would pick on the mildly autistic red headed adolescent boy growing up.

Taking advantage of the boy who was also a very late developer didn't help matters any either. I was even called ugly in my younger years, and suffered those nightmare-ish "ginger" stereotype slogans from males and females equally.

I haven't been with anyone really that I ever really desired as I was the guy who just wasn't seen as good enough in any ... See More

I'm nowhere on this list; the closest I come is the Normal Guy. Only I don't like my job; I am going back to school, and I almost got married 4 years ago but everything I had was not enough for her. So now I am cautiously optimistic about finding a relationship. but I am tired of "the game" that is dating. I have an online dating profile, but I don't like it. I don't go to the bar alone, and all my friends are in serious relationships. I am okay with being single, even though I still get lonely. I feel like things will be like this until I happen to meet a woman I hit it off with.

I'm definitely a 10. Ive had nothing but bad experiences meeting people through online dating, and the last lady who "pursued" me, unbeknownst to me, already had a boyfriend. Wasted a few months dating her. Sex was alright, but I don't relationship with the only goal of sex, cause I'm getting older. I want someone to care about, vise versa.

I've stopped making any attempts at pursuing a relationship. I don't have any friends who go to bars, or do anything that is good for meeting new people. So I just keep to myself writing books, participating in my tennis club activities. I have things I enjoy in life, that's enough to keep me sane. For the rest of my years.

I guess I have been number 7 for a long time. I've never really had a serious relationship. I have fallen in love before but that did not go well as I'm sure a lot of people have experienced. I have never really minded being single I guess I'm just used to it.....maybe too used to it. I am now 37 and for the first time I'm actually genuinely worried now. Deep down I think we all want to be loved and to love. But I feel that maybe that I might not ever experience that now. Its certainly a lot harder to meet new people now and that I wasted a lot of time being to comfortable on my own. And I do not like this.
